

Law final work

Due June 11, 2020. Answers need to be spelled check and in depth.

Overview

In this unit you will be exploring some of the legal issues related to the environment, labour and the workplace as well as international economic agreements. In our globalized world, these elements are all interconnected. There are many challenging questions that need to be addressed as international legal issues such as climate change, poverty, economy, politics, working conditions and conflict are connected to legal principles such as the rule of law, equality and fairness.

Read the content on the whole webpage. There are videos on the page to watch as well. Then answer the following questions in depth.

What do you think?

Take a close look at the actions of North Korea, the sanctions created by the international community, including Canada, and the impact upon humans and the environment. Please consider the questions below:

1. What is Canada hoping to achieve by implementing these sanctions?
2. Why would some exemptions be made? (Hint: Connect to international humanitarian law.)
3. Considering all of the sanctions already in place, what other options do you think the world community has to consider in order to address the concerns regarding North Korea? What are some of the dangers involved if stronger measures were used?

4. Of the human and environmental threats, which concern you the most? What actions would you like to see taken by individuals, groups, the Canadian government and the world community to address the issue?
